USSR-UN: [Moscow has indicated that it intends to stand firm on insisting that the UN resume normal voting before the USSR makes an unspecified "voluntary contribution."]

[During a 5 February discussion of the question of arrears, Soviet chief UN delegate Fedorenko rejected a number of compromise suggestions. He made it clear to Ambassador Stevenson that the USSR will refuse to consider any proposal which directly relates to the amount of arrears incurred by the Soviet refusal to pay for peacekeeping operations in the Congo and the Middle East.]

[The Soviet delegate hinted, however, at possible agreement on the question of setting up a new committee --presumably composed of the US, the UK, France, and the USSR--to study the problem of UN financing and peacekeeping operations.]

[In view of the strong sentiment for avoiding a show-down over the arrears question, prospects are that the General Assembly will be adjourned for several more months to permit the membership additional time to reach an agreement. The possibility of a US-Soviet confrontation early this week cannot be entirely ruled out, however.]
